

Exam Number:	Length (27-36K):
---------------------	-------------------------	--

Item	Points
How will the legal process start and proceed through initial hearing and initial appeal(s) before possibly reaching the U.S. Supreme Court or the Constitutional Council?
What is the nature of the body will be responsible for giving the final word on the constitutionality of the principal's actions (the Supreme Court in the U.S. or the Constitutional Council in France)? Specify how you view this body within the constitutional separation of powers scheme applicable in the U.S. and France, respectively.
What is the number, qualifications, length of service and method of selection and appointment of members of the SCOTUS and the Constitutional Council, respectively? Specify, if applicable, any particular specialty education, school, degree that are required or perhaps common among those selected.
How do these institutions relate to the systems that traditionally adjudicate civil, criminal or administrative matters in each country?
How and when will matters be submitted to these institutions given the nature of your case?
What will be the effect of the decisions of the constitutional review body when interpreting the Constitution of the United States or that of France respectively? Explain why, or on what basis. Please consider three areas: In the same case, as to courts and parties involved; Within the judiciary generally, meaning the systems that traditionally adjudicate civil, criminal or administrative matters in each country, as de facto or de jure "precedent"; and As to the other branches of government (legislative, executive and judiciary).	1. Structure/Question 2. Comparative Analysis 3. Overall Quality Good (A- to A): 76-100 Satisfactory (B- to B+): 51-75 Unsatisfactory (C- to C+): 26-50 Very Poor (E to D+): 0-25 MAX: 100 x 3